plumping, fillers can be used to improve and correct many imperfections.

"Fillers can be injected on the ridge of the lips (where liner would be placed) to give a more defined shape," she says. They can be used to correct fine lines above the lips where lipstick bleeds. They can be used to even out asymmetry. They can even be used to raise the corners of drooping smiles creating a softer, happier, younger appearance.

Dr. Fred Weksberg, a Toronto Cosmetic Dermatologist says that one of the most popular trends in lips today is combining thicker Collagen-based injectables for structure and definition with thinner Hyaluronic acids for volume. He describes the combination as being like jello setting in a bowl of spaghetti. The spaghetti is like the thicker injectable creating a structure and the jello, like the thinner one, making up the volume.

Dr. Weksberg says that besides being realistic, the most important thing to look for when enhancing your lips is to look for someone with experience—a specialist, not just any doctor. You should walk away looking like your lips are natural not someone else's.
